Counter Strike.Q: Python Thread local variable reset after calling function with Global and Nonlocal variables I am trying to understand Thread local variable and why it is necessary. I have below code to demonstrate the threads local variable. import threading class C(object): def __init__(self): self.x = 4 self.y = 3 self.z = 2 def newThread(self): return threading.Thread(target=self.temp, kwargs={}) def temp(self): self.x, self.y, self.z = 0, 1, 2 print(self.x) c = C() c.newThread() print(c.x) print(c.y) print(c.z) This code prints 1, 1, 2, which is not what it is supposed to be. The variable is not being reset after calling temp function. I am trying to understand why this is happening. Please clarify what I am missing here. A: The code you have written is not thread-safe. To make it thread-safe you must ensure that the local variables are not only read within the same thread but also assigned to from that thread. The code needs to look more like this: import threading class C(object): def __init__(self): self.x = 4 self.y = 3 self.z = 2 def newThread(self): return threading.Thread(target=self.temp, kwargs={}) def temp(self): with self.lock: self.x, self

Today we will show you how to download condition zero mods.Back when we were all, like, 12 or 13, our parents made a list of things that we didn't have a single problem with. The upcoming election – which, if you haven't heard, comes this November – is one of those very things. But like Christmas, which has also come and gone, our parents' list is coming back around again, ready to claim it as its own. As we geared up for the Republican and Democratic conventions, talking heads with titles like "New Hampshire House Speaker" and "Junior U.S. Senator from North Carolina" came forth with ideas for us, even though we'd left the house years ago. They offered us their opinions. "You're voting for Hillary?" they asked, as if we were picking china patterns or deciding what to watch on Netflix. We didn't know where to start, as if our years of conditioning meant our parents couldn't remember that before setting you free, you told the older generation to back the hell off. We stayed at home and watched the television, occasionally distracted by a stray comment from our mom or dad, who'd come home from shopping to see us in the parlor, watching footage of Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump on the set. After the debate on Wednesday night, they praised her personality and looked annoyed that he admitted he didn't understand what was going on. Their cavalcade of inane comments was, at times, almost as entertaining as the media coverage of the event. After their concession speeches on Thursday, we stayed home and watched Fox News, while our mother and father tried to watch the events as they unfolded. In her speech, Hillary Clinton gave her concession to the country, and then proceeded to, as The Washington Post put it, "act as if she'd been in charge for a very long time
