Severe Growth Failure and Maturational Delay in a 4-month-old Girl with a Novel Deletion of the EXT2 Gene. We report on a 4-month-old girl with a new 2.28-Mb deletion at 2p23-p24.2. She was born with skin lesions and severe growth failure. She was severely delayed mentally, and her development was primarily characterized by body growth retardation and delayed maturation of the genitalia. Skeletal radiographs revealed some features of rickets. Molecular karyotyping confirmed the deletion. A bioinformatic search did not reveal any known disease genes, but interestingly, CpG islands were present in the deleted regions. Our observation confirms that the EXT2 gene is a major cause of the syndrome. We propose to consider skin lesions and severe delay of growth and maturation as diagnostic criteria."
