$$\text{NH}_3 + \text{H}_2\text{O} = \text{H}_2\text{N}-\text{CO}-\text{ONH}_2$$
 Thus, metal-containing zeolites serve as catalysts for converting ammonia to urea, a preferred nitrogen fertilizer, which is an important raw material for agricultural use. For a zeolite catalyst to be economically and commercially feasible, it should be able to process large amounts of ammonia to urea quickly and efficiently. The entire reaction (i.e., mass of ammonia feed minus mass of urea produced) should proceed quickly and the yield of urea should be as high as possible. The reaction should proceed at ammonia to urea molar ratios up to 3, and even higher ratios are desirable, in order to take full advantage of the high reaction rates of ammonia with water which are achievable in such zeolites. Metal-containing zeolites having alkaline earth metal cations, as well as
